PRESENTATION

On October 29th 2004, heads of State and government of the 25 EU Member States signed, in Rome, the Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe. This signature launched the process of national ratifications of the text to take place before November 2006 in each Member State. The Netherlands is one of the countries which chose to consult its citizens by referendum in order to ratify this Constitution¹.

The Dutch referendum was held on June 1st 2005. A high turnout rate of 62,8% was observed for this vote. A huge majority of voters rejected the Constitution: the « No » obtained 61,6% of votes against only 38,4% for the « Yes ».

Directorate General Press and Communication of the European Commission conducted a post electoral survey in order to better understand the factors which determined the result of the referendum, but also the reasons for abstention, the motivations of voters and the possible scenarios following the 1st of June vote.

EOS Gallup Europe, through its partner institute in the Netherlands TNS NIPO, carried out 2000 interviews from the 2nd to the 4th of June. The methodology used is that of Flash Eurobarometer surveys (telephone surveys).

In the following pages the report analyses the following themes:

- Participation in the referendum : the profile of abstainers, the reasons for abstention, the role of information and of the debates
- Analysis of the results: the motivations leading to the choice of vote
- The consequences of the 'No'

¹ Spain held a referendum on the 20th of February with 76,7% of votes in favour of the "Yes". Voters in France went to the polls on the 29th of May and rejected the Treaty with 54,7% in favour of the "No".

1. Turnout in the referendum

This first part of the report analyses the turnout/abstention rates for the referendum held on June 1st 2005 and more precisely the profile of abstainers. Then this analysis aims to understand the main reasons for abstention but also the influence the level of information of voters had as well as their opinions on the debates concerning the Constitution in the Netherlands.

1.1. The turnout rate

Source questionnaire : Q1

- A very high turnout rate, sign of great interest in this European issue -

Close to two-thirds (62,8%) of Dutch electors participated in this referendum, and marked the first ever nationwide referendum in the modern history of the Netherlands.

The turnout rate was far above the 30 percent threshold set by most political parties in order for the referendum to be considered as valid.

Last Wednesday a Referendum was held on the approval of the treaty that establishes a Constitution for Europe. Did you vote in that Referendum?

The socio-demographic characteristics of the abstaining voters reveal the following:

- As it was the case in France and Spain, younger voters seem to have been less mobilised to vote than the older population. Over half the Dutch citizens aged 18 to 24 (54%) indicate that they did not vote in this referendum. Furthermore, close to one in two persons aged 25 to 39 (48%) abstained.
- Slightly more men (38%) than women abstained (35%).
- The occupation categories show that manual workers (46%) and the self-employed (43%) were more likely to abstain than those in the other occupational groups.

- People living in rural zones had a lower rate of abstention (31%) than those living in small or large towns
- People claiming that they did not have the necessary information to make their decision are far more likely to have abstained (41%) than those who, on the contrary, felt they were sufficiently informed on the Constitution.

1.2. Reasons for abstaining

Source questionnaire : Q2

- Lack of information is the main reason for abstaining -

Every second Dutch citizen (51%) who abstained from voting in the referendum indicates that they believe they were not sufficiently informed on the Constitution to vote. Women (54%) indicate this reason more than men (49%), corresponding to a difference of 5 points. A significant proportion of manual workers are also of this opinion (62%). On the contrary, fewer people aged 55 years or above and fewer of those with a high level of education cite this as being one of their reasons for abstaining.

Other than the reason that something prevented respondents from voting on the day of the referendum (41%), multiple reasons explain the abstention of these citizens as is illustrated in the graph below.

If you did not go to vote in the Referendum held on the 1st of June, is it because ... ? (% Yes)

Abstention due to the fact that "you are not interested in the European Constitution" is mentioned by 23% of the interviewees, and by 48% of those who went to school until the age of 15 or less.

People who did not vote because they thought the Constitution was too complicated are found more often among women (29%), those aged 25 to 39 years (33%), those with a low level of education (35%) as well as employees (35%) and manual workers (32%).

Results also show that people aged 55 years or above (35%) as well as those with a low level of education (39%) have a somewhat greater tendency than the average (26%) to claim that they believed that voting at the referendum would not change anything.

1.3. The role of the level of information

Source questionnaire : Q10g

In general, among the people who were interviewed, only 41% consider that before voting in the referendum, they had all the necessary information in order to take a decision, against 56% who say that they did not.

This proportion rises to almost two thirds among those who abstained from voting in the referendum (62%) compared to only 32% who affirm that they were sufficiently informed on the Constitution before the vote.

Furthermore, this is also the case for 47% of people who actually say they voted in the referendum, which means that one in two voters did not feel sufficiently informed before they actually voted on the Constitution.

A majority (51%) of those who voted « Yes » in the referendum felt they had all the necessary information to take a decision, while among those who voted « No » a majority (54%) claims that they were not sufficiently informed.

These results clearly point to a lack of information among Dutch citizens on the Constitution before the referendum and we can presume that the role of the level of information played an important part in the outcome of the vote.

1.4. The debates on the Constitution

Source questionnaire : Q9

- The debates on the Constitution started too late -

When asked about the timing of the debates on the European Constitution, a clear majority of respondents (67%) indicates that the campaign started too late.

While only 13% of Dutch citizens feel that these debates started at the right time, just 7% indicate that it started too early.

This result could explain why a majority of the Dutch citizens feel that they lacked information before voting. This result differs from the French situation but is, at the same time, similar to that of the Spanish one, where the "Yes" had an overwhelmingly win of 78%..

Would you say that the debates about the European Constitution in the Netherlands started ...

The socio-demographic analysis reveals the following information:

- Considerably more men (72%) than women (62%) feel that the debates on the Constitution started too late in the Netherlands, corresponding to a difference of 10 points.
- People aged 18-24 are less likely than older citizens to consider that the campaign started too late.
- Those with the highest level of education (74%) are considerably more likely than those with lower levels of education to indicate that the debates started too late.
- Citizens who turned out to vote (72%) are far more likely than those who did not (58%) to feel that the campaign did not start on time.
- Finally, those who felt they did not have sufficient information before voting (74%) are more likely to think that the debates started too late.

1.5. When did voters make up their minds on how to vote?

Source questionnaire : Q6

- The choice of vote was made at a very late stage for a significant number of electors -

Contrary to what happened in France, a considerable number of Dutch voters (approximately one third) made up their mind in the last days before the referendum. Indeed, while 21% indicate that they made up their mind on how to vote the week before the referendum, a further 11% answer that they made up their mind on the day of the referendum.

This phenomenon can be linked directly to the fact that a majority of the Dutch consider that the debates on the Constitution started too late. The campaign seems to have left a third of the voters doubt their choice of vote until the last days before the referendum.

Can you tell me roughly when did you make up your mind on how you would vote in the Referendum on the European Constitution?

The socio-demographic analysis shows us that:

- Considerably more women made up their mind on how to vote in the last days before the referendum (38%) compared to men (25%).
- Close to one out of two voters aged 18 to 24 years (47%) made their choice of vote, either the week before the referendum, or on the day of the vote itself.
- Manual workers are somewhat more likely (17%) than those in the other occupation categories to have made up their minds on the day of the referendum itself.
- Finally, voters who felt that they were not sufficiently informed before the referendum are more likely to have made up their mind in the last days before the referendum (39%) than those who felt they were sufficiently informed (24%).

Can you tell me roughly when did you make up your mind how you would vote in the Referendum on the European Constitution?

2. The analysis of the results

The second part of the report deals with the analysis of the vote itself. First it looks at the results of the referendum through the voters profile, at the motivations of the "yes" and the "no" vote and finally at the key elements which led to the choice of vote.

2.1. The vote

Source questionnaire : Q3

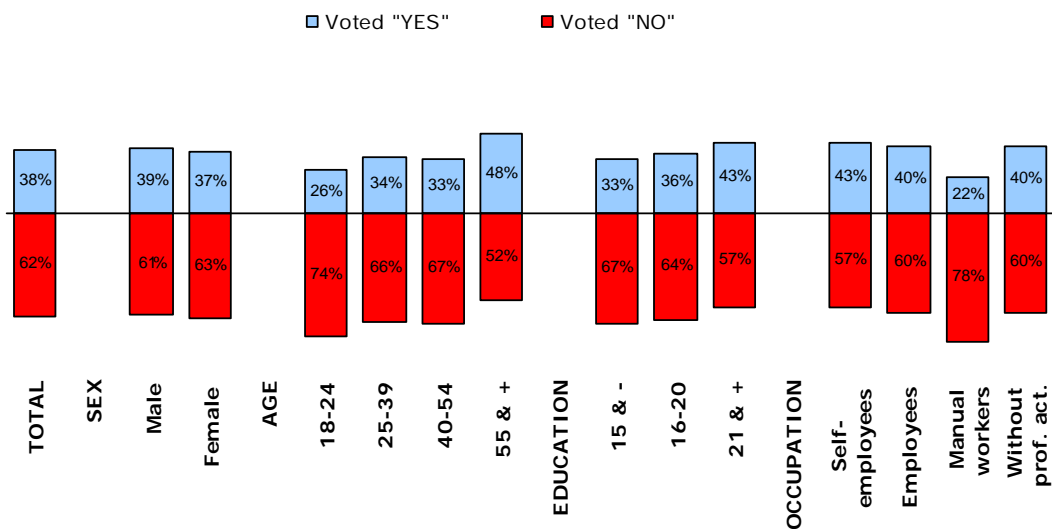

The results of the Dutch referendum show that the European Constitution was overwhelmingly rejected by 61,6% of voters in the Netherlands.

Results of the Referendum on the ratification of the Treaty which establishes a Constitution for Europe

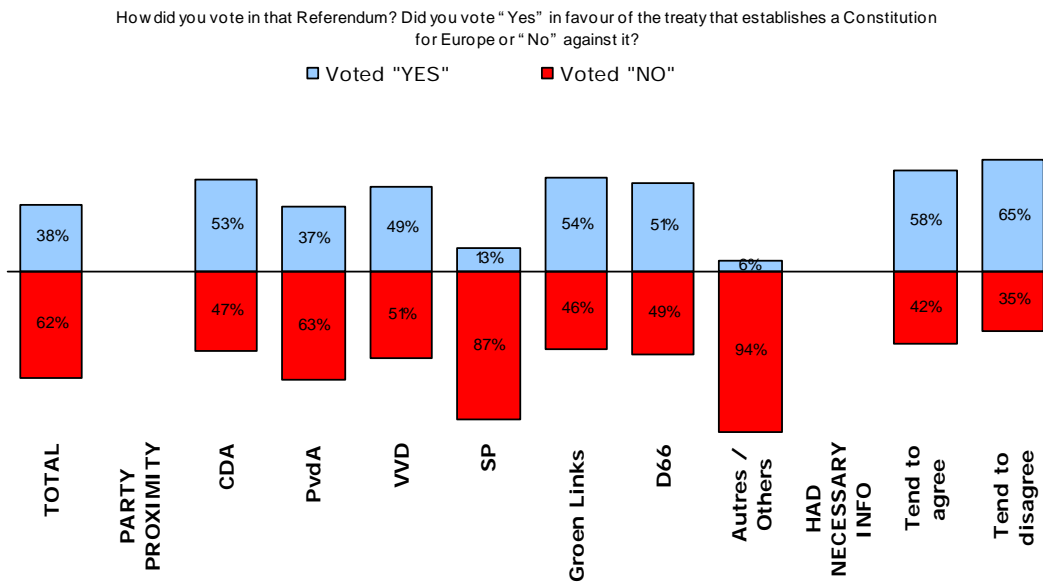

The younger the voter, the more he/she was opposed to the Constitution. 74% of those aged 18 to 24 years voted "No". The oldest group were far more divided since 52% voted "No" and 48% voted "Yes".

How did you vote in that Referendum? Did you vote "Yes" in favour of the treaty that establishes a Constitution for Europe or "No" against it?

Those who were educated until the age of 15 years or less (67%) voted far more strongly in favour of the "No" than those who studied until the age of 21 or older (57%).

Far more manual workers (78%) voted against the Constitution than the other occupation categories. The "No" vote for this category is 16 points above the Dutch average.

Almost all supporters of the "no" political parties followed the voting instructions of their camp. On the contrary, despite the fact that the Government party, CDA, called for a vote in favour of the Constitution, almost half of its sympathisers voted "no"..

Voters who feel that they did not have all the necessary information in order to make their decision were more likely to vote "no" (65%) compared to those who feel that they were sufficiently informed (58%).

2.2. The motivations of the « Yes » vote

Source questionnaire : Q4

- European construction is the main motivation –

The primary motivation of the "Yes" voters is the fact that they consider that the Constitution is essential in order to pursue European construction (24%). In addition, 13% mention that it strengthens the feeling of a European identity and 13% also mention that it strengthens the role of the Netherlands within the Union and the World.

A motivation that also receives a significant citation rate is the fact that the Constitution is essential for the smooth running of European Institutions (12%).

Other noteworthy reasons, which are ranked further down in the list, are the fact that the Constitution represents the first steps towards/ symbol of a political unification of Europe (10%), that it strengthens the EU over the USA (10%) and that it strengthens the economic and employment situation/ economic cooperation in Europe (10%).

2.3. The motivations of the « No » vote

Source questionnaire : Q5

- Lack of information the main explanation for the « No » vote -

The reasons for the « No» vote are very diverse. Nevertheless, it appears that it is the lack of information which could be considered as the main reason for voting against the Constitution, with 32% of all "No" voters indicating this reason.

The second most mentioned reason is the loss of national sovereignty (cited by 19% of the "No" voters), followed by opposition to the national government or certain political parties (14%) and by the references to the "cost" Europe has for Dutch tax-payers (13% indicated that they were motivated by the fact that Europe is too expensive).

Socio-demographic analysis:

The main reason for voting « No » namely the lack of information, raises some discrepancies among the different socio-demographic categories:

People aged 18 to 24 (27%) seem to have been less motivated by this factor than all the other age groups.

Persons with a high level of education also mention this reason more than the average.

Among the occupation categories, employees have by far the highest rate indicating that they voted "No" due to a lack of information on the Constitution equivalent to 38%. This rate is 6 points above the Dutch average.

If we look at when people made up their mind, we can see that those who decided in the final days before the referendum (37%) tend to mention this reason more than those who had made up their minds earlier on.

More respondents who are dissatisfied with the outcome of the result chose to vote "No" due to a lack of information than those who are satisfied with the result of the vote.

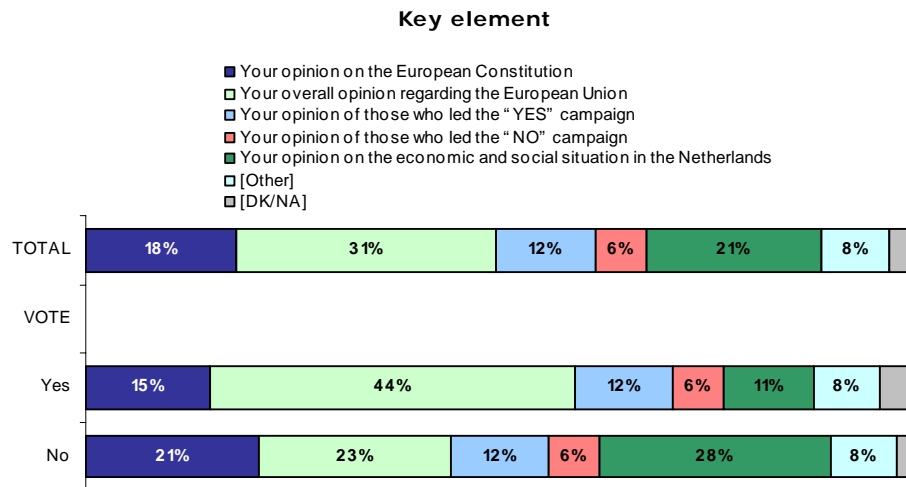

Party proximity shows that those who are closer to the VVD party (40%) indicate this reason more than other respondents.

2.4. The key elements leading to the vote

Source questionnaire : Q7

- The European aspect was the key element -

All in all, regardless of whether voters said yes or no to the Constitution, the overall opinion the Dutch share on the European Union was the key factor for their choice of vote (31%). The economic situation in the Netherlands (21%) and the opinion on the European Constitution (18%) follow in the ranking of reasons.

The graph shows that a relative majority of the "Yes" voters put forward the European aspect (44%), while those who voted "No" were divided on the key elements leading to their vote. Indeed, while 28% indicate that the key factor was their opinion on the economic and social situation in the Netherlands, 23% indicate that it was their overall opinion on the European Union and a further 21% that it was their opinion on the European Constitution.

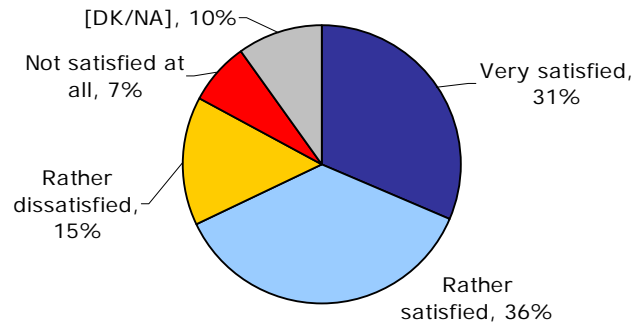

3. After June 1st – What next ?

3.1. Satisfaction regarding the final result

Source questionnaire : Q8

Regardless of whether or not they voted, respondents were asked to indicate whether they were satisfied with the outcome of the referendum. The results of the survey show that voters and non-voters seem to be satisfied with the victory of the "No". 67% indicate that they are satisfied with this result against only 22% who are dissatisfied.

Regardless of whether or not you voted, are you satisfied toward the « No » victory?

The « Yes/No » division is significant in this case and influences the distribution of answers in the different socio-demographic categories. 25% of those in favour of the Constitution indicate that they are satisfied with the outcome of the referendum and the victory of the "No".

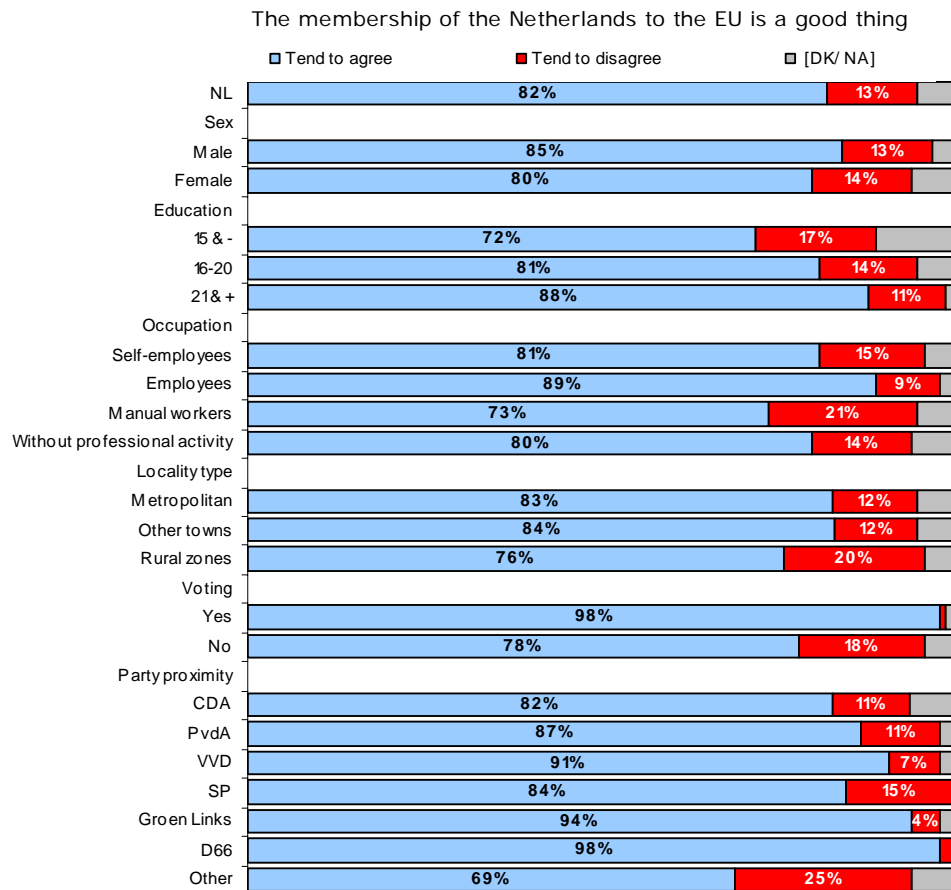

68% of those who abstained are satisfied with this result, which theoretically leads us to conclude that they place themselves in the "No" camp.

3.2. The stakes of the referendum for the European Union

Source questionnaire : Q10 d, j, a

- A vast majority of Dutch citizens support the membership of the Netherlands to the EU -

Although the « No » vote clearly won in the referendum, the Dutch do not question their country's membership of the European Union. On the contrary, in the opinion of 82% of Dutch citizens, the Netherlands membership of the European Union is a good thing. This opinion is not only present among citizens who voted « Yes » but also among a clear majority (78%) of those who voted "No" to the Constitution.

Slightly more men (85%) than women (80%) agree with this statement.

The education level of respondents shows that people with a low level of education (72%) are significantly less likely to agree with this statement than those with the highest level of education (88%).

Compared to other occupation categories, far less manual workers (73%) tend to agree that the Dutch membership of the EU is a good thing. 89% of the employees agree with this opinion.

The locality type reveals that people living in rural zones (76%) are somewhat less enthusiastic about the Dutch membership of the EU than people living in small or large towns.

Finally, people who consider themselves close to the Green Party as well as the D66 Party have the highest rates agreeing that EU membership is a good thing.

-A majority do not consider the Constitution to be essential -

Every second Dutch citizen (50%) does not think that the European Constitution is essential in order to pursue European construction.

Women (44%) are somewhat more likely than men (39%) to agree that the European Constitution is essential in order to pursue European construction.

The population aged 55 years and above (47%) also tends to agree more with this statement than those who are younger, especially those aged 25 to 54.

Significantly fewer manual workers (32%) compared to the Dutch average (-9 points) think that the Constitution is essential.

Finally, people close to the CDA party have the highest rate agreeing that the European Constitution is essential. This is the only category of party proximity where a majority of respondents agree with this statement.

- Most Dutch do not have a good image of the European Institutions-

Following the referendum, opinions on the European Institutions are fairly negative: for 61% of the Dutch people the European Institutions do not conjure up a good image.

The analysis by socio-demographic results shows that men have a somewhat better image of the European Institutions than women, at respectively 34% against 28%.

The age categories reveal that the youngest citizens (37%) are the most likely to have a good image of these institutions.

Those with a high level of education also tend to view the European Institutions in a more positive manner than those with a lower level of education.

People close to the CDA party are the most likely to have a good image of the institutions.

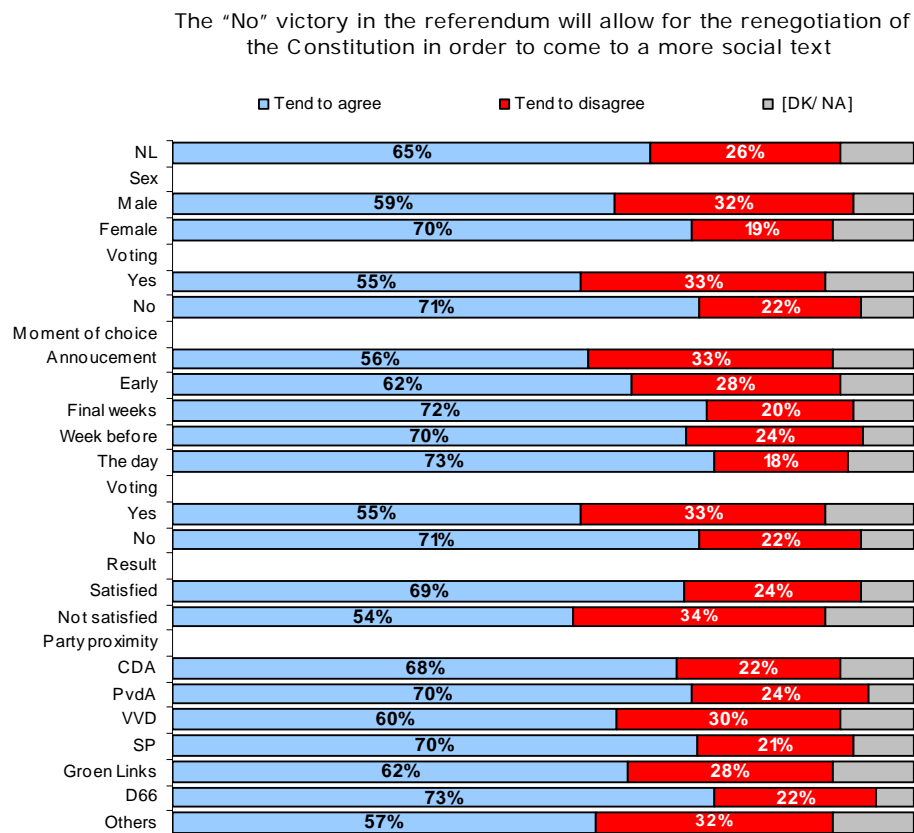

3.3. The consequences of the vote

3.3.1. Renegotiation of the Constitution

Source questionnaire : Q10 b,c

- « No » voters believe in a renegotiation towards a more social Constitution -

A clear majority of Dutch respondents (65%) agrees that the rejection of the Constitution would allow for a renegotiation of the Constitution in order to place greater emphasis on the more social aspects.

71% of the "No" voters share this view, while it is the case for only 55% of the "Yes" voters.

Significantly more women (70%) agree with this statement than men (59%).

- Most Dutch citizens believe a new renegotiated Constitution could better defend the interests of the Netherlands -

Two thirds of Dutch citizens (66%) also agree that the "No" victory will allow for a renegotiation of the Constitution in order to better defend the interests of the Netherlands.

Among the "No" voters (73%) a clear majority believe that the Constitution can be renegotiated in favour of Dutch interests. Only 53% of the "Yes" voters share that view.

3.3.2. The influence of the Dutch « No »

Source questionnaire: Q10 e,i

- 4 out of 10 « Yes » voters fear that the Netherlands will lose its influence within the EU -

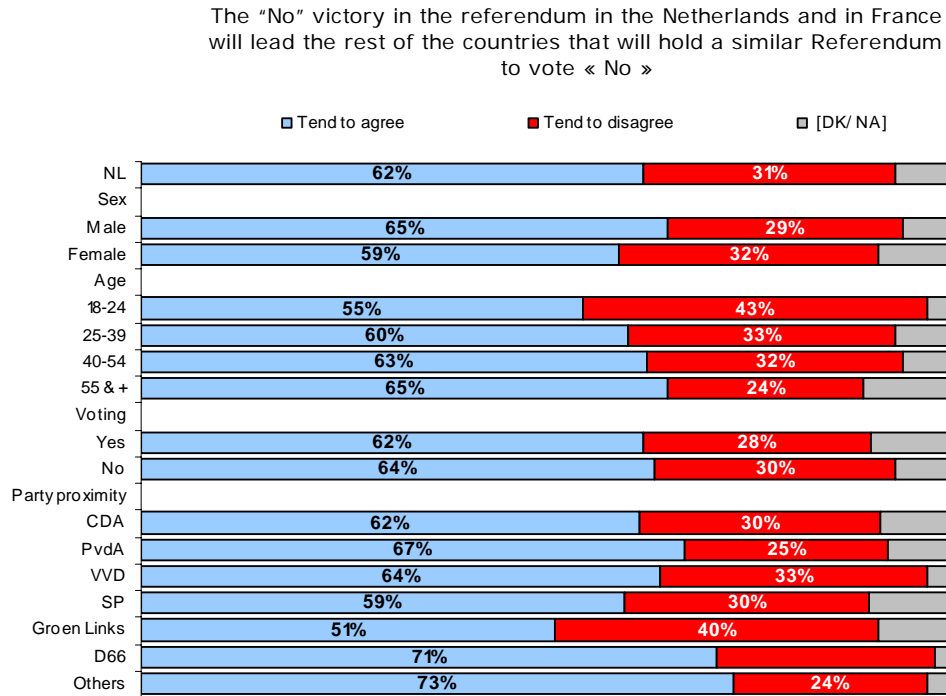

Respondents were asked whether or not they agree that the rejection of the Constitution puts the Netherlands in a weaker position within the European Union. Two thirds of Dutch citizens do not agree with this opinion.

However, this disagreement rate is far higher among the "No" voters (77%) than among the "Yes" voters (51%).

- The Dutch believe their choice will influence the other Member States -

62% of Dutch citizens believe that the victory of the « No » in the referendum will lead the other EU Member States holding a similar referendum to vote « No ».

Looking at the socio-demographic results, men (65%) agree more with this scenario than women (59%)

The older the population the more the respondents tend to agree that the French and Dutch "No" victories will influence the referenda in the rest of the countries where such a vote will take place.

Respondents who are close to the Green Party have the lowest proportion (51%) to believe that the rejection in France and the Netherlands of the Constitution will influence the other countries in their vote.

3.4. The future of the Constitution

Source questionnaire : Q11

- Abandon the Constitution or a second chance? -

Declaration 30 of the Constitution foresees that "if, two years after the signature of the Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe, four fifths of the Member States have ratified it and one or more Member States have encountered difficulties in proceeding with ratification, the matter will be referred to the European Council".

In such a scenario, close to one in two Dutch citizens (45%) would like to see the Constitution abandoned. This rate is clearly higher than that observed in France (36%).

A further 27% indicate that a new vote should be organised in the countries where the Constitutional Treaty has not been ratified (against 35% in France).

If between now and Nov. 2006, at least 20 of the 25 MS ratify the Constitutional Treaty, the European Council should decide on the procedure regarding the application of the Treaty within the EU. Which of the following propositions would you prefer?

If we look more closely at the type of respondents who believe that the Constitution should be abandoned even if at least 20 Member States have ratified it, we can note that those aged 40 to 54 years have a greater tendency to be of this opinion compared to the other age categories (50%).

A majority (54%) of those who voted "No" believe the Constitution should be abandoned. Furthermore, a significant number of people who voted in favour of the Constitution (36%) also agree that since it was rejected by the Dutch people, it should now be abandoned.

CONCLUSION

The turnout of 62,8% was indicative of the relevance of the European Constitution for the Dutch population, surpassing the turnout rate recorded in the last European Elections (39,3%).

Although citizens complain about the lack of information on the Constitution and the fact that debates started too late, the reasons for the overwhelming rejection of the Constitution (at 61.6%) are more complicated than a simple lack of information. Indeed in the Netherlands, the referendum has not only been used as a channel for criticising the Government (14%) but it has also shown that "no" voters are worried about a loss of sovereignty within a political union (19%) and also complain about the cost of Europe for tax-payers (13%).

On the other hand, the main motivation of the "Yes" vote was to further the process of European construction, as was the case for Spain and France. Indeed, 24% of all respondents who voted "Yes" in the referendum cite this reason. The fact that 'it strengthens the feeling of a European identity' and that 'it strengthens the role of the Netherlands within the Union and in the World' are motivations which come in second place with an equal result of 13% of respondents mentioning these.

One out of four of those who were in favour of the Constitution indicate that they are satisfied with the outcome of the referendum i.e. the "No" victory. Furthermore, more than two thirds of those who abstained are satisfied with this result.

Regardless of whether or not citizens voted and whether or not they expressed their support or rejection of the Constitution, their country's membership of the European Union is far from being questioned: 82% consider EU membership as being a good thing.

However, while the Spanish and French widely support the notion of a Constitution for Europe being essential for European construction, the Dutch are far less convinced and most of them disagree.

For a majority of respondents, EU Institutions do not conjure up a good image. EU institutions have an image problem even among groups which have historically supported European construction, that is to say, the Government coalition (CDA, VVD and D66) and the Social-Democrats (PvdA).

As far as the consequences of the "No" victory are concerned, a clear majority of Dutch respondents (65%) agree that the rejection of the Constitution will allow for its renegotiation in order to place greater emphasis on the social aspects. Moreover, two in three (66%) also believe that the "No" victory will allow for the renegotiation of the Constitution in order to better defend Dutch interests. A majority of those who supported the Constitution at the polling stations share this opinion and believe in a renegotiation in both directions.

Conduction of this survey details

This telephone survey FLASH EUROBAROMETRE 172 "The European Constitution: Post-referendum in the Netherlands" was conducted for the European Commission, Directorate-General "Press and Communication".

Il s'agit d'un FLASH EUROBAROMETRE STG (Group cible spécifique), organisé et géré par la Direction Générale PRESS, Unité B/1.

The interviews were conducted between the 02/06/2005 and the 04/06/2005 by the EOS GALLUP EUROPE Institute in the Netherlands : TNS-NIPO

Representativity of the results

The national sample is representative of the population of 18 y.o. and above registered to vote.

Sample size

The sample size amounts to 2000 respondents

A weighting factor has been applied on the national result in order to represent the national population of the Netherlands, the result in the Referendum and the vote results in the last European Elections

In the report we have presented side by side the number of interviews:

- 1) Actually conducted in this country
- 2) Derived from the weighting in proportion of the population of the Netherlands, the result in the Referendum

Statistical significance of the results

The results in a survey are valid only between the limits of a statistical margin caused by the sampling process. This margin varies with three factors :

1. The sample size (or the size of the analysed part in the sample) : the greater the number of respondents is, the smaller the statistical margin will be;
2. The result in itself : the closer the result approaches 50%, the wider the statistical margin will be ;
3. The desired degree of confidence: the more "strict" we are, the wider the statistical margin will be.

As an example, examine this illustrative case :

1. One question has been answered by 500 people ;
2. The analysed result is around 50%;
3. We choose a significance level of 95 % (it is the level most often used by the statisticians, and it is the one chosen for the Table hereafter);

In this illustrative case the statistical margin is : (+/- 4.4%) around the observed 50%. And as a conclusion : the result for the whole population lies between 45.6% and 54.4 %.

Hereafter, the statistical margins computed for various observed results are shown, on various sample sizes, at the 95% significance level.
